RUSSIAN RHEUMATISM CURE

HAS PROVED TO BE

THE REMEDY FOR RHEUMATISM.

MARION, IND., Aug. 12, 1886.

My wife was so afflicted with Rheumatism in her shoulder and arm that she could do no sewing for three years, and could not sleep in bed, but had to be bolstered up in a rocking chair. Physicians did us no good, many patent medicines were used, but the pain still grew worse. I sent for the Russian Rheumatism Cure, under a cloud of doubts. It was used according to directions, and in a few weeks she was cured. It was one of those agreeable surprises that you meet once in a lifetime. It is now over four months since the cure was effected, and she can work as much as any lady in the garden, and do all kinds of work as well as ever, and has no symptoms of the disease. We have no hesitancy in recommending the cure to all similar afflicted, as Mrs. Alice Stone.

Truly yours,

H. J. FISHE

OUTWARD BOUND.

I sit and watch the ships go out
Across the widening sea;
How one by one, in shimmering sun,
They sail away from me.
I know not to what lands they sail,
Nor what the freight they bear;
I only know they outward go,
While all the winds are fair.

Beyond the low horizon line
Where my short sight must fail,
Some other eyes a watch will keep,
Where'er the ships may sail;
By night, by day, or near, or far,
O'er narrow seas or wide,
Those follow still, at love's sweet will,
Whatever may betide.

So round the world the ships all sail,
To dreary lands or fair;
So with them go, for weal or woe,
Some dear ones everywhere.
How will there speed each lagging keel,
When homeward it is laid;
Or watch will keep, o'er surges deep,
If there a grave be made!

O human love, so tried, so true,
That knows not mete nor bound,
But follows with unwearied watch
Our daily changing round!
O Love divine, O Love supreme,
What matter where I sail,
So I but know, where'er I go,
Thy watch will never fail?

ANNIE'S LUCKY ERROR.

It was but the Monday previous, at Mrs. Moore's, that George Berkley, after dancing with me twice in succession, had asked me if he might have the pleasure of escorting me to the theatre the next evening.

"I should be very happy." But instead of sailing off with him in all the glory of my spring attire, I was obliged to tell him, when he called for me, looking so himself, poor fellow:

"I regret it extremely, but papa wishes me to wait a year or two yet before I go out with gentlemen; he thinks me rather too young."

I dare say my papa's conscience must have smote him, or else my doleful looks troubled him, for as we were finishing dessert, he said:

"Annie, if you would like to go to the theatre to-night, run upstairs and get ready. I will take you."

"After all," said I, as I mounted the stairs, "I can wear my beautiful bonnet; and perhaps he may be there—who knows?"

Ere another hour I was absorbed in the misery of poor Effie Deans. I turned my head to wipe away the starting tear, when lo! but a little distance from me, sat George Berkley, with that odious Marion Raymond!

My tears remained frozen to my eyelids, and the woes of Jennie and Effie vanished in thin air.

When the play was over, I rose with the invincible determination to adjure his acquaintance at once and for ever. As for the detestable creature. The tears so blinded my eyes, I could scarcely follow papa through the crowd. He dropped my arm a moment to find the carriage, and I stood chilly and cold in the damp night air, till I heard his impatient tone:

"Come, Annie, quick!"

I darted forward, sprang through the open door, which closed rapidly, and away we all rattled.

Leaning back among the cushions, I let my pride and grief have full sway. There was a suffocating sensation in my throat that caused me to lower the window by my side, when a gruff voice exclaimed:

"Good heavens, Maria! what do you want any more cold air in here for? I am nearly frozen now!"

Merciful heavens! who was that? Where was I? Surely that was not papa's voice.

At this moment a ray from a passing gaslight shone upon the opposite seat, and to my horror and dismay, instead of the gray hair and placid brow of papa, was a mass of very black hair, a heavy moustache, a keen black eye, and a nose of unmistakable countenance.

I was just about uttering one desperate shriek—"Papa! papa!"—when my amiable companion spoke again:

"Maria, what makes you so sulky? I hope, the next time you go to the theatre you'll go with one of your beaux—Elridge, for instance. You'd be sweet enough for him, I dare say. Maria, are you asleep?"

I held my breath in agony.

Who could he be? He surely could not have murdered papa and stolen his carriage. But this bloodthirsty idea was abandoned as soon as formed, when, suddenly, clear as the noonday, it became apparent. I, in my blindness, had sprung into the wrong carriage! And "Maria!" Could it be? Yes; she had doubtless been left on the pavement as the vehicle rolled away.

The rain by this time was falling so heavily that the idea of exposing myself to its influence was extremely disagreeable—especially as I reflected it was near twelve o'clock, and I had not the most remote idea of where I was. Poor papa—what would he think had become of me?

Here a new thought flashed across me—possibly that unknown Maria had taken my carriage, as I had hers; if so, papa would bring her back and recover me. As I arrived at this comforting conclusion, the carriage stopped.

"Come, Maria, wake up! We're home."

And jumping out, I mechanically accepted his offered hand, and stepped out in the blinding rain. The carriage quickly rolled away, and I hurried up the steps of what appeared to be a fine structure.

I found myself in a handsome lofty hall, with frescoed walls and inlaid pavement—made discernible by a dimly burning light, held by a marble nymph that stood in a niche of the staircase.

He locked and barred the heavy double doors, and while thus engaged, the thought occurred to me—it was evident my height and general appearance resembled the absent Maria; by keeping my face turned I might avoid notice till he went upstairs.

I would remain in the hall until daybreak, then flee away home.

"Well, sis," said my companion, "were you dreaming so intently that you have not awakened yet? I hope for the credit of the family you are not a somnambulist."

I yawned sleepily by way of reply, and loiteringly pretended to follow him up the stairs. With three bounds he had vanished.

"Now," thought I, as I silently retraced my steps to a large hall-chair, and seated myself with immense satisfaction, "if there are no ghosts or goblins in this enchanted realm, I shall be very very well content to remain here till morning. Good heavens! what's that?"

The gas which had been undisturbed, now burned brightly, and looking up I saw the retreating figure of my quondam companion, minus coat and boots, and heard his footfall coming down what appeared to be a back stairway.

He entered a room at the further extremity of the hall, and soon reappeared with a book in his hand.

"Doubtless," thought I, "he will return the same way, so I won't get frightened."

But no! his light firm step came steadily along; and in another moment, with gleaming eyes and pale visage, I stood—or rather sat—before him.

He staggered back as though he saw a vision, and glared at me in blank astonishment, faintly ejaculating:

"Gracious Heavens, what is that?"

I tried to speak, but could only stammer forth:

"I, indeed, sir—I—I could not help it. It was a—a mistake!" and burst into a violent flood of tears.

"In the name of Niobe!" said he, advancing, "who are you? Don't be so agitated, miss, but please to explain to what I am indebted for this unparalleled honor."

But I could not explain, for my sobs were bursting forth with redoubled vigor.

"I entreat you to be composed," his tone softening considerably; "there is no occasion for such distress. If you are in trouble, miss, and I can relieve you, I shall be happy to do so."

"Indeed, sir," said I, striving to regain my self-possession, "I am very sorry, but I mistook your carriage for my father's, and did not perceive it till I heard you speak; and then I was so frightened."

And here I cried again.

"Poor little thing!" ejaculated he in an undertone; then aloud: "Don't feel so badly; it is only a little blunder that can easily be rectified in the morning."

"Oh," said I eagerly, "then you believe me, and don't think me an impostor?"

He threw back his head and laughed, while the white teeth gleamed under his moustache; then said gravely:

"I don't think you look like an impostor; although—let me see, are you sure you don't want the spoons?"

"Sir," I returned with much dignity, "my father's name is Morton. We live in——"

"Excuse me, Miss Morton, for my presumption; and now, if you will allow me to suggest, my sister's room is unoccupied, and I think you had better rest there till morning. If you wish, I will call my mother to attend you."

"No—no! I beg you will not—I would rather stay here; and as soon as day dawns, I will return home, for I know papa will be almost crazy about me."

"And," said he musingly, "if I wake mother, I suppose she will be almost crazy about Maria; although I apprehend she has made the same mistake as yourself, for I saw her turn from her friends the moment before you entered the carriage. I am afraid papas and brothers don't make very gallant escorts, else this awkward affair would not have happened."

"Indeed!" exclaimed I, rather piqued, "papa is left me an instant to find the carriage, and then called me, but I suppose the rain and darkness blinded me."

"And," returned he, "Maria stopped a moment to speak to some friends, and I, being a little out of patience, sprang in ahead of her;—but I am very negligent. Allow me to present you to Mr. Graham Thornton."

Here he made a low bow.

As I bowed in reply, I looked keenly at him, and found that my first impressions were erroneous. He was handsome—very handsome, and possessed that calm dignity and quiet manliness that always fit a true gentleman like a garment. Very different, thought I, from the babyish namby-pambyism of that odious George Berkley.

He had been scrutinizing me as closely as I him, and now said:

"You look rather pale, Miss Morton, and I infer you don't feel any the better for your night's adventure."

Without waiting a reply he strode down the hall. Presently he returned, bearing a silver waiter, laden with cake and wine.

During our repast he asked my opinion of his conduct in the carriage, and said he had been annoyed at the theatre that evening.

I could not but smile to think how nearly our feelings were allied.

Scarcely had we finished when through the deadened sound of the rain, I heard a carriage driven at a furious rate.

"Oh, it's father!" said I, springing up.

As Mr. Thornton quickly unbarred the doors, in walked papa, accompanied by a young lady.

"My darling!" cried he, "how could you run away from old papa?"

Mr. Thornton was busily engaged questioning his sister as to how and when she discovered her error.

"Why, Graham," said she, "it was all owing to your sulkiness. If I had not known how cross you were in the theatre, probably I should have gone as quietly home with Mr. Morton as his daughter did with you."

"Do tell us how it was!" cried we both.

"It isn't worth telling. Is it, Mr. Morton?"

Papa laughed till the water stood in his eyes.

"Just as you please, Miss Thornton," replied he. "If you don't wish it, torture shan't draw it from me."

Of course, our curiosity was now excited to the highest pitch, and brother insisted on an explanation.

"There is not so much to tell you need be so anxious to hear it," said Miss Thornton. "When Emma Wilson stopped me on the pavement, she told me she is going to be married next week to Mr. Monroe, and she has only known him three weeks; then she wished me to be bridesmaid, and requested me to invite you to take me with them on their bridal tour.

"All this news so startled me that I had jumped into the carriage and ridden some distance before I fully realized it.

"Then I wondered whether or not you would take me, and the more I thought of it, the more I wished to go. So, knowing you felt rather cross, I thought I would coax you a little; I—I——"

Papa interposed with a merry twinkle in his eye:

"If Miss Thornton will allow me, I will finish, and tell my part of the story. In the theatre, I saw my little girl was not very happy; so, when we were returning, I thought silence would be the best cure, and left her to her own reflections.

"We had nearly reach the bridge, when she moved nearer to me, and—and she put both arms around my neck and kissed my cheek!"

Amid our laughter, papa continued:

"I drew her to me, and said: 'Well, Annie dear, how do you feel now?' For an answer, I was greeted with the most terrific shriek I ever heard, and she made frantic attempts to open the door."

Here our loud and continued laughter wakened the sleeping inmates, and a voice inquired:

"What is all this fuss about?"

"Oh, mother!" said Mr. Thornton, "do come down! I have something rich to tell you; and call father, too!"

Papa interposed and said we had trespassed on their hospitality already too long.

So we withdrew, but not before our cards were given, and promises made of future friendship.

As Maria and I exchanged a kiss, I noticed that we were nearly the same height and size, and dressed in almost the same manner.

I will be generous and confess she is a little bit prettier than I.

One pleasant evening, not long since, I sat in the dim moonlight, listening to low-breathed words from my lover, Mr. Thorton, when the dim quiet was disturbed by a violent ring at the bell.

We both listened intently, and I heard the tones of George Berkley inquiring of the servant if Miss Morton was at home.

My companion drew me still closer to his heart, and pressed a quiet kiss upon my lips, as John answered at the door:

"Yes, sir, Miss Annie's at home; but she is engaged."

AN OBSCURE HEROINE.

A Scene in the Slums; One Bright Spot of Purity.

You pass through a hideous London slum; the oil lamps flare and flicker in the wind, the hoarse hawkers shriek, the ragged children cry shrilly, and from the public houses come the confused babble of laughter and cursing and the rank wafts of acrid smoke.

Blowzy women, draggled women, brazen women, drunken women, pass you; ugly male nightbirds scowl at you with savage eyes; foul mouthed young girls—mere children, alas!—salute you with impudent confidence, and the night is full of rank odors and bleared lights.

You enter a narrow alley, watching carefully the manœuvres of the skulking creatures who slouch around with humped shoulders and evil gaze. A door opens and you are in the midst of a strange assemblage. A bevy of women gather around some long tables and watch you with dull curiosity. Here is one who is pinched with hunger; her thin fingers are knotty at the joints, her hair is wofully scanty, and she looks beaten, bloodless, sorrowful. Here is a bold creature who meets your look with a hard brutal stare; she has heard the chimes at midnight. Here is a specimen of the ordinary dirty, garrulous trollop so freely produced in the wilderness of London. Here is a mere female animal, a creature without soul, who sits callous-ly glowering at vacancy.

A coarse laugh sounds out harshly, and then a quiet voice with the tone of a mellow bell soars along the low room, and instantly the disorder is stilled.

You move to the head of the room, and you are greeted by a white-haired woman dressed in black. Her eyes is like steel, her lips are composed, her forehead is very placid and her manners are the manners of a great lady.

She is fit to move in any assembly in the world, and her dignity would draw the eyes of men and women wherever she went. Beautiful she has been, and the exquisite remains of her fairness remind you of some splendid building grown gray with stress of years. When she speaks you hear that indefinable accent which is attained only by those who live among ultra-refined people from their earliest years. A lady this of the highest breeding.

You feel as if you were in the presence of a queen, yet she puts you at ease instantly, falls into conversation with polished grace.

Witty she is in a subtle way, and her wit is so strangely blended with pathos as to present a unique product of intellectual chemistry. She knows the world, and can flash out an occasional speech worthy of the salon rather than of this dingy shed; but the ruling aspect of her face and the essential tones of her voice, are those of one to whom the affairs of the world are of small moment.

She masters the evil assemblage in front of her, and the boldest slut that ever disgraced her sex is reverential toward the grave, kind lady whose will dominates all. As you talk, she tells you of her work. This refuge is open every night for the homeless, and her duty is to help those who are poor, to heal those who are sick, to raise with loving merciful words and deeds those who are fallen. None are too base for this lovely, all embracing charity; and as she sits there she seems like the Spirit of Goodness made flesh.

Romances in plenty she can tell, and she does so with soft matter-of-fact sweetness. Every form of human wretchedness is known to her, and her eyes are fired day by day on sights of woe. Does she ever leave that fearful quarter? Never! Think of that, O discontented pining folk! This lady who was once beautiful, rich, courted, has given up all for the sake of working beneficently in the weary world, and she passes her days in an appalling London slum. Lords and ladies o' her own class see her, but they remain only for a little time; she stays at her post with stiff constancy, and bears the squalor, the noise, the loathsome sights and sounds the recital of wringing records of misery.

She is content even to forego her name, and her very identity has perished from the brilliant world that once knew her. "I am Sister Zillah," she says, with her courtly smile, and that is all.

Here is one who is an honor to London, to England, to the human race, toiling obscurely in a place where even men of the better class hardly dare venture.

They Never Do.

On one of the telephone circuits in the western part of the city, where four subscribers use the same line, one of them was called up the other day by a second on a matter of business.

"You say you paid $2 per yard?" queried the first.

"No, I don't say exactly."

"But my wife wants to know. Give me the exact figures."

"I will the first time I see you."

"But why not now?"

"Because Mrs. L., who is on the line, is always listening at her telephone to hear what the rest of us say, and my wife doesn't want her to know."

"Oh, that's it. I thought you might be afraid of Mrs. B. That's one of her tricks, too, though I guess both of 'em are away to-day. Good-bye."

"Hold on there!" called a voice as the trumpets were about to be lowered. "I am Mrs. L and I want to tell both of you men that you state a deliberate falsehood when you say I listen! You are no gentlemen, and my husband shall make you apologize!"

"And hold on some more!" called a second voice. "I am Mrs. B. and any one who says I listen to other people's talk has got to prove it in court! Make up your minds to hear from me."

Four trumpets were carefully lowered from four ears and hung up on four telephone boxes, and deep silence broods o'er the land.—[Detroit Free Press.

Good Advice.

If a man comes along and wants you to take stock in a company forming to recover the sum of $5,000,000 sunk in some British ship off our coast in 1814, don't be in a hurry to part with your dollars.

The British Minister at Washington has looked all these things up, and he reports that no wreck can be found which had over $10,000 aboard, and there were very few of them.

Better put your money into speckled turnips.—[Detroit Free Press.

Ministering On Business Principles.

Cobb county, Georgia, has an energetic colored preacher who makes each member of his flock responsible for a definite amount of his salary, and when they have no money to give him he makes them work on his farm until they pay off their debt.

By this means, despite their color, his flock has no black sheep.

RIDING ON THE COWCATCHER.

Once Often Enough for That Style of Locomotion.

The St. Paul Globe gives the following account of a ride on the cowcatcher of a locomotive:

"I say, Miles, can't we go out and ride on the engine?"

"I don't know about that. Johnson, the engineer, is a good fellow, and he's almighty particular about that iron pet of his. When we stop I'll go forward and introduce you, and then you can ask him yourself."

"The whistle, the moan and the shriek of escaping and compressed steam from the Westinghouse, the protest and creaking of the slowing wheels tell of an approaching pause at a water tank.

"We go forward with the brass-buttoned deity of the 'limited' and are introduced to a self-poised, thoughtful-looking man in a blouse, who is busy with an oil can about the machinery of his impatient and panting iron horse.

"A word of explanation from the conductor and we are left to plead our case.

"'Ride in the cab? Well, I don't know. I'll think about it and tell you at the next station.'

"And the oiling went on.

"Should we go back to the confident conductor and have him say: 'I told you so,' in response to our tale of defeat?

"Hardly; and with a silent but mutual resolve to ride on the engine we steal up under the headlight and plant ourselves under the cowcatcher. Each braces himself for the perilous trip, and each ties an arm to one of the bars with a handkerchief.

Now we are off, and the whole world seems to spin backward under our flying feet. The speed increases and the great monster seems to make vast leaps from rail to rail.

We round a sharp curve and the sensation is that of being thrown violently into illimitable space.

"We skirt the river's brink and on one side a cliff frowns upward, while below the dancing waters shimmer in the moon's glad rays.

"We dive into a deep cut, and the moaning of the mighty power by which we are propelled sounds doubled.

"We plunge through a gloomy forest and the sleeping trees nod a welcome, and the prowlers of the night rush deeper into their familiar haunts, awed and frightened by the Cyclopean visitation.

"Past green fields and farm houses we fly with the speed of the wind and the roar of a cyclone, while ever before us, calm and steady, gleams the path of light from the reflector, and behind it sits in all the well-won dignity of power and responsibility the man at the lever, his eye on the line and his hand at the throttle.

"A yell as if of a million fiends rises on the air, the bell clangs, electric towers loom up in the distance. We are approaching a town, we are going to stop, and as the Minneapolis man howls in my ear, we are glad of it!

"Cold and stiff, stretch our cramped legs, climb aboard, take a parting night-cap and go to sleep, to awake hundreds of miles away in the city of Chicago."

EBENSBURG, PA.,

FRIDAY - - - JUNE 3, 1887.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND and wife are spending a two weeks vacation in the Adirondacks.

THE bodies of 600 Chinese will be disinterred at San Francisco this week and shipped by steamer to China for final interment. The Celestials think they will be lost unless deposited in the soil of China.

EIGHTY-FOUR Irish emigrants who were ready to land in Philadelphia one day last week, were not permitted under the pauper act. Their passage had been paid by the English Government, in order to get them out of the country. They will be sent back.

A RESOLUTION that American fishermen must abide by the laws governing Canadian fishermen in the event of their being admitted to Canadian waters, by a treaty between the two Governments, was unanimously adopted by the Senate, at Ottawa, on Tuesday last.

MAJOR BEN. PERLEY POORE a noted newspaper man who has long been a conspicuous figure at Washington, died in that city on Saturday last. He was the author of a number of books, had established the Congressional Directory, and was acquainted with every public man in the country.

IT has been discovered at Harrisburg by Governor Beaver that the name of George Handy Smith, President of the Senate is not affixed to the general Revenue Act, and that it therefore falls under the Constitution. Many appropriations based upon the increased revenue will suffer in consequence.

THE New York Star has undertaken to raise $125,000, for the purpose of building a monument to the memory of General Grant, at Riverside Park. Sums from 1 cent up to ten dollars will be received, but no larger amount. President Cleveland has sent a donation of $10 and a letter warmly commending the undertaking.

THE Philadelphia Record says: The newspapers throughout the country appear to be making the most of their opportunity for placing in nomination candidates for a place on the Bench of the United States Supreme Court. Luckily, a newspaper nomination does not cost much and does not count for much. Some of the persons suggested might do well enough in umpiring a baseball match or in holding a stop-watch for a horse race.

CLARA CIONARALE, an Italian woman, was convicted in New York city last week of murder in the first degree, for the killing of her husband, by shooting with a revolver. She will be sentenced to-day, (Friday,) to be hanged. The officers expect a harrowing scene when brought up for sentence, as the woman has completely broken down since her conviction, refuses all food, and moans pitiously all the time.

A NEW French ministry has been formed and General Boulanger's place as Minister of War, has been filled by General Saussiere. It was claimed that the continuance of Boulanger as Minister of War was a constant menace to Germany, and his plan of military organization too expensive to the country. He is without doubt, to-day, the most popular man in France, and it is thought that his displacement will be only temporary, and that he will come back to power before long. He has asked for a furlough on "account of ill health," which if refused will make him the object of the army's sympathy, and if granted, will make the people believe that the new ministry are too anxious to get rid of him. The German press seem to be of the opinion that the check to Boulanger is only temporary.

THE price of coffee has advanced 100 per cent. within a year. It is estimated that if the price keeps up as at present the coffee drinkers in this country will pay during the present year $50,000,000 more than they paid in 1885, or an equivalent to a tax of nearly $1 on every man, woman and child in the country. The supply is entirely inadequate to the demand owing to a partial failure of the crop in Brazil, Java, and British India, and a leaf disease that has attacked the berry in the Island of Ceylon. It is said that if the leaf disease which thus far has been confined to Ceylon spreads to the other coffee producing countries, the days of coffee drinking are numbered, as thus far all attempts to check it have been unsuccessful, and the time will come when a cup of coffee will be one of the luxuries instead of an article of daily consumption.

GENERAL MASTER WORKMAN POWDERLY in an address issued to the Knights of Labor in regard to the Fourth of July, gives the following advice in regard to resolutions to be passed: "I desire also that the question of the restoration of the people's lands to the care of the people be discussed. Pass resolutions declaring that the holding of from fifty to sixty millions of acres of the public domain by aliens is sinful and un-American. Go further, and demand that the alien landlord shall let go his hold. Pass resolutions declaring that every acre of land acquired by fraud, perjury or chicanery is an acre stolen, and demand that the thief be required to make restitution to the people. Pass resolutions never to take your eyes of the land until one good, plain, simple, honest law shall govern the holding of land, whether the holder be rich or poor, individual or corporation. Make the land for the people, under the people's laws, the question of the day. It was not for air, sunshine or water alone that our fathers fought; it was the land free from the shark and speculator, whether native or alien."

THE New York Herald does not profess to belong to any political party, and has always been independent in its course, although, more frequently acting with the Republicans. A leading article published last week in the Herald is an indicative straw showing the way the wind is blowing. The political situation as summed up by it is as follows:

The people of this country see clearly that a Democratic administration means peace and commercial prosperity. It is evident that the business community in every part of the continent is not only satisfied with the present order of things, but will decree its continuance. National affairs are conducted on the lines of a policy at once conservative and patriotic. If there is a lack of that dangerous brilliancy which would entangle us in foreign complications, there is an increase in the public sense of security. Confidence prevails everywhere. No doubts or fears or suspicions lurk in the air. There is no prevailing feeling of uncertainty to interfere with commercial enterprise and adventure. When we take an account of stock we find that our political books balance, and there is no dreaded crisis to which we look forward with trepidation. The country is on its feet, with cool blood and a level head and the pleasant consciousness of health and strength.

That is what the Democratic party is doing for the people. It is distinctively the people's party. It goes slowly, perhaps a little too slowly for some of our more aggressive citizens, but it carries a heavy burden of responsibility and does not propose to dump it into the ditch. It is better to have a reputation for looking before you leap than a reputation for leaping before you look. The mere partisan like Blaine, might make a brilliant administration, but it would be personal rather than National, and its brilliancy would be at the expense of the Nation's happiness and welfare. The man of more sober counsel, who regards public office as a public trust, who is the peoples' servant and not a monarch with a four year term, is the only fit person to become the Executive of the Republic. We are not a war loving race. We have a great country to develop. We are absorbed in the manipulation of our material resources. We are making use of the opportunities for wealth which are everywhere offered to the industrious and persevering. When an administration to which we delegate the oversight of our National interests honorably steers clear of foreign entanglements, keeps us free from intestine confusion and checks encroachments on the rights of any section of the country, it achieves the loftiest victory and wins the highest renown which a Republic affords.

That is what the Democratic party and the Executive have been doing for more than two years. They have served the country faithfully, and the country recognizes the fact.

The Republican party was overthrown, in spite of its desperate use of patronage, by an aroused and alarmed people. It had fallen from its high pretige of great moral ideas, and while it retained the garb of the patriot it entered upon the life of the spoilsman. It was born of love of country, it ended in love of power. It began by serving the whole, but it ended by serving itself.

TO-MORROW, (Saturday,) is the Primary Election, and it behooves every Democrat to go to the polls. At the polls you can make your selection of candidates to fill the different offices and get in your work for or against any particular person. It is poor policy to remain at home until after the election and then complain about the candidates nominated. Every year there are enough Democrats stay away from the Primary Election, who if they had gone to the election and all voted alike, could have nominated the man who received the smallest vote on the ticket. The man who will be second for Treasurer at the coming Primary Election will have friends enough remain away, who, if they had voted, would have changed the result. The offices to be filled are important ones, and every Democrat should help to make the ticket, then, if after the election, you find that all your chosen men are not nominated, or even none of them that you voted for, it will be a satisfaction to know that you done your duty for them, and that they were not defeated by your neglect. There was a Governor of Massachusetts a few years ago elected by one vote, and every man who voted for him felt happy, because he was the man who done it. Some of your friends may be defeated at the coming Primary by one vote, but don't you be the man to do it. To use the words of the soap man "Clams don't vote. Don't be a clam." Go and vote.

EUROPE was shaken last week from centre to circumference. A calamity, the like of which only happens once in a century, that might have been prevented by human foresight, but unfortunately was not thought of in time, appalled the chivalry of England. That Queen Victoria is still alive is a matter to be wondered at, for it is announced "that a daring milliner by some unaccountable means ran the gauntlet of the Lord Chamberlain's office, and at the last drawing room reception was presented to the Queen." Queen Vic swooned when she discovered it.

IT is estimated that since the commencement of the building strike in Chicago, $900,000 has been lost in wages which would have been paid if work had gone on as usual. Not only the wages have been lost, but every other business that would have been benefitted indirectly by the circulation of that a vast amount of money has suffered.

A COMPLETE list of the Appropriation Bills passed by the Legislature at its recent session shows a total sum appropriated of $11,911,679.39 distributed as follows:

General Appropriation Bill	$6,567,512 56
State purposes	2,604,170 40
Distinctively State purposes	1,317,062 40
Institutions not strictly State	887,500 00
Hospitals	793,836 20
Homes, schools, etc	247,065 00
Erection of tablets, etc	194,900 00
Miscellaneous	176,000 00
Individual claims	22,561 00
Pensions and annuities	1,281 00

WORK FOR THE COURTS.—The Harrisburg Patriot says: After every session of the Legislature there is always extra work for the courts in interpreting the newly made laws and in reconciling them with the law as it existed before and since there have been radical changes made in the old laws by the last Legislature the prospect is that the courts will have more than the ordinary amount of labor to perform to get things moving properly in the new grooves.

The principal measures which will figure extensively in the courts are the High License Law and the new Revenue Law. It requires only a cursory examination of these two pieces of legislation to discover that they are both full of inconsistencies which will necessitate more than the usual amount of "liberal and beneficial" construction to fit them into their places in the statute books.

It kept the courts busy for a number of years to adjust matters under the Revenue Act of 1879, in which the changes in the old law were few as compared with those made by the law which has just passed, so it may be reasonably expected that a much longer time must elapse before the various questions arising under the new law are settled, even if a succeeding Legislature does not still further mix things.

This being the case the State cannot expect to realize at once the large increase of revenue which upon the untrameled working of these measures would flow into her coffers. Appeals from the settlements for licenses and taxes will tie up at least temporarily large amounts, so taken at its best the revenue from these sources will for some time to come be precarious and Governor Beaver will doubtless remember this fact when he is pruning down the overgrown appropriations of the last session.

WHETHER the visit of William O'Brien to Canada is likely to be of any practical benefit to the cause he represents may be questioned, but he has at least succeeded in drawing up a terrible indictment against Lord Lansdowne, the force of which is increased by the fact that it has been launched in the territory where the latter holds sway, and in spite of all the unmanly and illegal efforts to quash it. The men who have pursued Mr. O'Brien with such relentless ferocity will, of course, claim that his mission has been fruitless; but there can be no doubt that he has opened the eyes of all intelligent Canadians to the fact that the Governor General has, through his agents, been guilty of the greatest inhumanity and injustice. No opportunity has been given to the English Tory press to assert that what has been done has been simply the work of American politicians, for Mr. O'Brien has not yet spoken in any American city; nor can it be said that the men whom he has addressed are all Irishmen. Many of them are undoubtly loyal British subjects, but their loyalty does not blind them to the truth, and the sympathy of such men ought to count for much in the struggle that is being waged so determinedly in Parliament. That the mass of the Canadian population, independent of creed or nationality, feel that the matter as it has been presented to them cannot be laughed away by sorry jests or by street riots must be the conviction of all intelligent men, and the thought might well make the English Government pause in the policy that it is attempting to carry out so mercilessly.—Philadelphia Record.

AFTER THE INDIAN LANDS.—Indications of a raid on the lands held by the tribes in the Indian Territory are multiplying. Although the title of the Indians to these lands is secured by the most solemn pledges that the United States could give, the desire to get hold of the valuable property is too strong to be curbed much longer; and some remarkable specimens of logic are produced to support that end.

One of them is advanced by the St. Louis Globe-Democrat to the effect that the Indian proprietorship of the lands is a leading specimen of land monopoly, because 44,000,000 acres of land are held by 70,000 Indians. As this makes just 552 acres to each Indian, it seems that the excitement of our cotemporary is somewhat misplaced. With land grabbers numbering their acres by the millions, the possession of 552 acres by each Indian does not seem to be so prominent a case of land monopoly that treaty obligations need be violated to rectify it.

But this is surpassed by a current report of an abuse, said to have been discovered by a Senatorial committee which is taking an excursion through the Indian Territory this year. It is asserted that the Indians live comfortably on the produce of their labor is the source of much surprise not unmixed with horror. Indeed! Did the objectors to this practice never hear of other land owners hiring men to work on their farms?

Indignation that the Indians have actually adopted the civilized vice of hiring labor and paying for it, is a novel expression of the fundamental conviction that the Indian has no right to his land—when the white man wants it.

WAR TAXES FOREVER.—The Republican party is rapidly committing itself to the policy of perpetuating the war taxes forever. Senator Sherman favors the spending of the surplus, be it more or less. Mr. Blaine's organ in this city proposes to reduce the revenue by increasing the tariff nearer to the prohibitory point. And this is the Republican alternative—to maintain the taxes and squander the surplus, or raise the taxes to prevent it.

As a matter of fact and of history, every reduction of duties made since 1865 has been followed by a diminution in the revenue. So that there is reason to believe that the people might be relieved of unnecessary taxation, and the Treasury of unnecessary revenue, by the simple and statesmanlike policy of abating the taxes. But in order to preserve and increase the bounties given to a small class of favored manufacturers—bounties which are now 25 per cent. higher than when these "infant industries" were given all the protection they had the face to ask under the Morrill Tariff of twenty-five years ago—the Republican organ proposes to build still higher our Chinese Wall against commerce.

Perhaps "war taxes forever" would prove a popular shibboleth in 1888. But it presupposes the fact that the people love to be robbed.—N. Y. World.

THE CHOLERA IN SOUTH AMERICA.—Two radically conflicting reports are given concerning the presence of cholera at Buenos Ayres. One brought by a vessel which left that port some time ago, says that the people are dying off like sheep, and that the ravages of the disease are terrible. Another from a citizen of that place denies the statement and says that there is hardly any disease at all. The probability with regard to such conflicting statements is that while the alarmist report is somewhat exaggerated, it is nearer the truth than the interested denials which try to save commerce and business, by declaring that there is no epidemic. There is certainly enough foundation for the various reports concerning cholera in South America to warrant the strictest quarantine, and the utmost sanitary precautions in the United States. We have got to get ready to fight the epidemic at our doors next year, if not this one, and a small amount of preventive work will be worth more than any quantity of attempts to cure after it has got a foothold here.

THE public debt reduction for the month of May is estimated at from $8,000,000 to $9,000,000.

Memorial Day.

Monday last, was a pleasant sunny day and nature seemed anxious to do her part in rendering a fitting tribute to the honored dead. Early in the morning our stores, business houses and a number of private dwellings were decorated by skilful hands and children on the streets were to be seen carrying flowers to the engine house where arrangements had been made for the procession to start from.

At one o'clock the procession formed at the engine house and headed by the Ebensburg Cornet Band marched down to Centre street, thence to High street, thence west to Julian street and up Julian street to the Catholic cemetery, where a crowd had already collected to witness the dedication of the monument to the Rev. R. C. Christy, deceased, Chaplain of the Seventy-eight Regiment P. V. C.

After the arrival of the procession the band played a fine selection of music, and a beautiful floral tribute was placed upon the grave. Judge Johnston then stepped upon the temporary platform erected for the occasion and after referring briefly and eloquently to the memory of the late Father Christy, introduced Lieutenant Colonel Archibald Blakely of Pittsburg, who served in the same regiment with Father Christy during the late war. Colonel Blakely, who is a pleasing speaker spoke for about an hour on the life and services of Father Christy, paid a glowing tribute to his character as a Chaplain, related a number of incidents that happened while in the service and spoke feelingly of their friendship while in the service.

The monument which we some time ago, described is a neat marble shaft 16 feet high surmounted by a cross and stands at the head of the grave in the enclosure of the sisters of St. Joseph.

The graves of the following named veterans who repose in the Catholic cemetery along with Father Christy, were, also decorated with flowers: Stephen Chase, James C. Noon, Jeremiah Fagan, James Litzinger, John Lambaugh, Mark Edelblute, Jackson Litzinger, F. P. Tierney, Thomas Litzinger, Captain James Murray, Andrew Weible, John E. Scanlan, Captain John Porter and William Mills.

The procession then proceeded to the Congregational cemetery, where the remains of the following named soldier dead peacefully repose and decorated their graves: Edward Davis, Thomas O. Evans, Milton Roberts, Richard R. Lewis, David Evans and George W. Todd.

From thence the procession marched out to Lloyd's cemetery and decorated the graves of the following named patriots: George W. Davis, John G. Evans, William R. Humphreys. David H. Evans, Griffith Evans, Evan R. Davis, Charles H. Heyer, Adam Shinefelt, David Powell, Thomas Todd, Peter Linton, Joseph Henderson, —— Libby, Edward Evans, Hugh Jones, James Roberts, William D. Davis, Daniel T. Jones, Thomas J. Lloyd, Jeremiah Evans, Thomas B. Moore, Benjamin Williams, James A. Littlefield, Thomas R. Evans, David Evans, Samuel Henry, David S. Jones, John Pugh, J. Todd Hutchinson, George R. Sechler, Captain Daniel O. Evans, Benjamin Lloyd and Joseph Pugh.

The procession then returned to the engine house and disbanded. The weather as we said before was fine, and everything passed off pleasantly. A number of country people and strangers were in town during the day and witnessed the ceremonies.

A Terrible Railroad Accident.

A terrible accident occurred about three quarters of a mile east of Kittanning Point on the Pennsylvania Railroad on last Friday night, about half-past eight o'clock, by which six people were killed and a number of others seriously injured. Fast Line West left Altoona at ten minutes after 8 o'clock and was composed of two engines, an express car, baggage car, four passenger coaches, a parlor car and two sleepers, and when it reached the scene of the accident a coal train was going eastward on the other track. The axle on one of the coal cars broke and the car left the track, crashed into the side of the third coach about the centre of the car tearing out the side of it, and the front part of the fourth car. The night was very dark and the cries of the wounded were heartrending and those who were unhurt were apalled at the accident. The passengers who were unhurt and the crews of the trains soon set to work to extricate the injured and remove the dead. The coal from the coal car and the debris of the passenger car were scattered over the dead and wounded, and it took sometime to get them out. Four passengers, John Dorris, of East Liberty, Pa.; Dale Graham, of Allegheny city, son of ex-Speaker, Graham; J. H. Stauffer, of Lewisville, Ohio; Weymer Snyder, of Shamokin, Pa., were found dead, and Charles Beidleman, of Brindsfield, Ohio, and Charles E. Morrell, of New York city, died after being taken to Altoona.

The wounded were as follows: George H. Pagels of Columbus, Ohio, received hurts to his head and leg and was generally shocked. A. Agen, of Fayetteville, N. Y., had received a slight cut on the head, and his right side was somewhat injured. Clara Albert, a young lady of Flint, Michigan, had received a contused wound of the left wrist and lacerated wound of the left eye. Hattie Luckett, of Alexandria, Va., had received a compound fracture of he right rib and several cuts about the head. Edith Glese, a little girl aged 11 years, was traveling with her mother. They were in the first of the wrecked cars and she was pushed almost through the side of the car and was caught by her mother. The latter received some slight scratches on her face and the little girl was completely prostrated by the shock. Mother and daughter reside in Chicago. R. H. Porter, colored, of Detroit, Michigan, had his left leg severely bruised, as was also his face. He was caught under the falling timbers and had to be pulled out. William Moore, was struck by a piece of timber and knocked through a car window, but beyond a few scratches was unhurt. Rev. John Alford, of Beaver Falls, Pa., received several cuts about the face and head by being struck by a piece of timber.

A relief train was sent out from Altoona with a number of physicians, and the injured were taken to Altoona where every care possible to afford them was rendered.

—On Friday last, the workmen at Swoopes stone quarry at Mapelton, in Huntingdon county, went on a strike because of a reduction in wages. They were previously paid by the cubic yard but the manager decided to pay by the car load which, the men claimed, would make a considerable reduction in the day's wages. There are almost forty men employed at the quarry and it is said they declare they will stay out until their demand is complied with.

Brace Up.

You are feeling depressed, your appetite is poor, you are bothered with Headache, you are fidgetty, nervous, and generally out of sorts, and want to brace up. Brace up, but not with stimulants, spring medicines, or bitters, which have for their basis very cheap, bad whisky, and which stimulate you for an hour, and then leave you in worse condition than before. What you want is an alterative that will purify your blood, start healthy action of Liver and Kidneys, restore your vatality, and give renewed health and strength. Such a medicine you will find in Electric Bitters, and only 50 cents a bottle at the drug stores of E. James, of Ebensburg, and W. W. McAteer, of Loretto.

NEWS AND OTHER NOTINGS.

—Operations in the Standard Rolling-mill, near Norristown, have been suspended because of the unreliability of the employes.

—The Bellefonte Nail and Iron Company is shipping nails to Portland, Ore., Mexico and Valparaiso, Chili. It is turning out 500 kegs a day.

—Mrs. Samuel Meredith, of Patterson, Miffin county, who weighed 400 pounds, fell dead Saturday evening from apoplexy after a hard day's work.

—Annie Shaeffer, of Oriental, Juniata county, coughed up a needle on Monday that had lodged in her throat more than three years ago.

—The large steam saw mill at Snow Shoe, Centre county, owned by Byers, Hopkins & Co., of Lock haven, was totally destroyed by fire Tuesday morning. Loss $80,000; insurance, $10,000.

—Benjamin J. Evans, tax collector of Banks township, Luzerne county, has been arrested on a charge preferred by the School Board of embezzling $2,500. He was sent to the Mauch Chunk jail to await trial.

—Senator Stanford's vinyard at Vina, Cal., is probably the largest in the world. On a 30,000 acre ranch he has 3,500 acres planted in bearing vines. The vineyard is divided into 500 acre tracts, and most of the work is done by Chinese.

—The Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company on Monday announced a semi-annual dividend of 2 per cent., payable on June 11. The business of the company for the first six months of the year shows a marked increase compared with the same period of last year.

—Mrs. Nancy Britton died recently in Germantown, Pa., of a cancer in the face, at the age of ninety-nine years and seven months. Her husband died eleven years ago at the age of ninety-eight. She leaves four children and forty grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

—President Judge Gunnison, of Erie decided last week against the legality of an ordinance of that city under which a "chain-gang," composed chiefly of tramps, was established to work on the streets, and the prisoners were discharged. The issue was made in Court by the Knights of Labor.

—Eleven cars, all loaded with high-class freight, were demolished in a wreck on the Pennsylvania Railroad, about half a mile west of Irwin Station, early Sunday morning. No lives were lost, but the freight that was spoiled and damaged, and the rolling stock that was destroyed, will cost the railroad company a good many thousand dollars.

—A burglar entered the house of John H. Richardson, of Waterloo, N. Y., the other night, and in doing so awoke Mrs. Richardson, who jumped out of bed and knocked him down with a chair. The burglar managed to get up and escape, but not before he hit the plucky woman on the head with a sand bag. The blow was not serious in its results.

—In his admirable address before the Church Temperance Society in New York City on Sunday evening, the Rev. Dr. W. R. Huntington prescribed the three Ts—Toil, Thrift and Temperance—as the best antidote for poverty. The phrase was so happy that it was caught up at once, and now it is said that a society is to be organized in that city which will aim to spread the idea.

—Information that disastrous results had followed the use of a special ink manufactured for writing on glass caused a stir in the New York Health Department Friday. Dr. Cyrus Edson's attention was called to the fact that a lady had to have a finger amputated owing to the poison absorbed from the ink. It is made of flour spar dissolved in sulphuric acid. Its further sale has been prohibited.

—Reports made to Thomas J. Edge, Secretary of the State Board of Agriculture, indicate a wheat crop far below the average. The short yield is ascribed to dry weather after seeding; the drifting winds of winter, which blew all the snow off the fields and left the grain unprotected at a critical period of its growth; a heavy rain which froze and March winds which dried out the roots. The wheat yield is estimated at about 10,500,000 bushels. An average yield in this State is 14,500,000.

—A man named Magee was on trial recently, in Bedford county, for making illicit whisky, but as it couldn't be shown that he had made any within four years he was acquitted. The still which Magee used seems to be possessed of wings. It has been located in the mountains of Virginia and Maryland, and in Fulton and Bedford counties, this State, and although the Government officials have been after it for 22 years, they have never been able to capture it. At one time there was a reward of $500 offered for it. Its location is a mystery at the present time.

—Sixteen-year-old Patrick J. Smith sacrificed his life to save that of a smaller companion on Wednesday. Smith was employed in Hamilton's paper mill, at Lafayette, Montgomery county. He and another lad were engaged in assorting rags when the clothing of the latter caught in the machinery. Smith sprang forward and, while extricating his co-laborer, had one of his hands caught by the machinery. He was whirled around and thrown to the floor, sustaining a concussion of the brain and other injuries, from which he died in the Pennsylvania Hospital, Philadelphia.

—For the first time in the history of Maryland a Grand Army post attended services in a Catholic church at Baltimore on Sunday last, in uniform. It was Burnside Post, with its drum corps and the Howard Zouaves, all in uniform, but without music. The veterans were escorted by the Knights of St. Aloysius. The services consisted of a mass and an address by the priest, Father Jordan. He praised the soldiers and said that their attendance broke down the barrier which has hitherto existed between the Catholic Church and bodies outside the church. Although former invitations, he said, were not accepted it was not on account of the denomination. The church was St. Bridget's.

—The best place to buy clothing is at McConnell & Sauppe, St. Lawrence Block, corner of Eleventh avenue and Fourteenth street Altoona. They are constantly receiving new and stylish goods and have none on hand out of date, or out of style. Their spring and summer suits are sold at lower prices than you can any where else buy the same quality of goods. Give them a call when you visit Altoona.

—On Thursday of last week, the body of a man, about fifty years of age, wearing a dark suit of clothes, and a low crowned, dark Derby hat, was found near the Nagle school house, in Clearfield township, on the road from Marx's Mill to St. Augustine, about a mile and a quarter from the latter place. The man was a tramp, and has been passing through that locality for several years, and was known by sight to several people who saw the body, but his name is unknown. The remains were interred at St. Augustine on Friday afternoon.

—Mr. Andrew Fitzsimmons, who keeps a saloon on Portage street, Conemaugh Borough, is just now enthusiastically interested in oil and gas territory over in Blair county. He states that himself and others associated with him have leased several thousand acres in the vicinity of Newry and East Freedom, and that they will shortly sink a test well. He has had ten years' experience in the oil country, and claims that the indications for a find of oil and gas in the country indicated are first-class. Mr. M. W. Keim is interested in the enterprise. The test hole will be drilled at a point between Newry and Freedom.—Johnstown Tribune.

—The following clause in the marriage license law as amended, which we published last week was stricken out before its final passage; "Provided, That nothing in this act shall be so construed as to prevent either party from making application for such license, by or through any next friend or relative, which next friend or relative may make the required proof on behalf of the person represented by him or her." The candidates for marriage therefore, must apply in person for the license, but they can apply seperately or together, before a justice of the peace who will fill up the necessary blanks to be filed with the Clerk of the Court.

—Mr. Philip Fenton, arrived home from Philadelphia on Thursday, where he has been spending the last month.

—Mr. William Tierney, of Cambria township is building a new house, and Mr. Daniel Carney, a near neighbor is erecting a new barn.

—The following persons can each receive a letter by calling at the Ebensburg postoffice: Maggie Smith (2), William Delaney and Robert Jones (south).

—Mr. Richard Tibbott has taken a contract from Mr. David Davis (Jackson,) of this place, for erecting a store room and dwelling on a property in Morrellville, recently purchased by Mr. Davis.

—Under the new State revenue law passed by the Legislature, the following properties are exempt from taxation for State purposes: "All household furniture, including gold and silver plate, owned by individuals or corporations; all pleasure carriages, and all watches owned or kept for use, any former act imposing such tax being hereby repealed."

—In an address delivered by John Wanamaker before the Philadelphia Mercantile Association, 21st ult., he said this about advertising: "I never in my life used such a thing as a poster, a dodger or handbill. My plan for fifteen years has been to buy so much space in a newspaper and fill it with what I wanted. I would not give a column advertisement in a newspaper of 400 circulation for 5,000 dodgers or posters. If I wanted to sell cheap jewelry or run a lottery scheme I might use posters, but I would not insult a decent, reading public with hand bills. The class of people who read such things are poor material to look to for support in mercantile affairs."

—The Hercules and Pearl Flour sold only by Edward Griffith, in this town, is manufactured exclusively from choice selected No. 1. Pennsylvania, Red Wheat, by the Steelton Flouring Mill Co., of Steelton, Pa. This mill is of large capacity, equipped with the latest and most complete machinery, to which is added promptly any improvement which will raise the quality of the flour. The brands manufactured by them rank with the best in the United States, and are so recognized, not only in this country, but in Europe, Brazil and the Island of Cuba; the shipments to those countries having reached a total in one month of 12,000 barrels.

The Johnstown Tribune of Saturday last says: Mrs. Polly Grumbling, of Adams township, apparently died on Saturday of last week, and was laid out for burial. Her disease was cancer of the throat. On the day following, her step-brother, Jacob G. Varner, Esq., of Adams township, while standing by the supposed corpse, placed his hand on her forehead, when the eyes winked and finally opened. Mr. Varner was very badly frightened for the moment, but soon recovered, and called the attention of others in the house to the lady's condition, whereupon she was hastily taken out of her grave clothes and placed upon the bed from which she had so recently been taken. She has since been "quite lively," as a neighbor expresses it, and has been able to partake of nourishment in a liquid form. Mrs. Grumbling was still alive yesterday, and while there is no hope of her recovery it is possible that she may survive for a considerable time.

Their Business Booming.

Probably no one thing has caused such a revival of trade at the Drug Stores of E. James and W. W. McAteer as their giving away to their customers of so many free trial bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption. Their trade is simply enormous in this very valuable article from the fact that it always cures and never disappoints. Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma, Croup, and all throat and lung diseases quickly cured. You can test it before buying by getting a trial bottle free, large size $1. Every bottle warranted.

Burglary.

On last Saturday night thieves were operating in Loretto. The postoffice in that place was entered and some small change, probably a couple of dollars, all that was left in the money drawer, was taken but nothing else disturbed. About fifteen dollars worth of postage stamps that were lying in the drawer were left untouched. Entrance was affected through a window which was pried open. The door was first attacked and the marks were plainly visible where the thieves had unsuccessfully tried to pry it open and falling there, they then tried the window which was not so strongly fastened.

The same night, and without doubt the same parties entered the shoe store of Mr. James O'Donnell, the father of postmaster O'Donnell, which is located across the street, a few doors further down and took as near as could be ascertained about twenty pairs of shoes. Some parties are suspected, but on Sunday several pairs of shoes were found near Gallitzin and if the shoes found prove to be the ones stolen from Mr. O'Donnell the parties suspected are not guilty. A quantity of shoes however have been stolen from the railroad cars at Gallitzin lately and the shoes found may be part of the goods taken from the cars.

75cts. PER YARD AT MANY STORES, BUT 25cts. AT GABLE & CO.'S.

Those Beautiful Summer Shades of Dentelle Dress Goods, 38 and 40 inches wide, are being sold by Gable & Co.—at 1402 Eleventh avenue, Altoona,—for 25cts. a yard; worth three times the price. This is only one of the many Dress Goods Bargains you'll find at this Mammoth Dry Goods House.

THE ONLY STRICTLY ONE-PRICE DRY GOODS HOUSE IN CENTRAL PENN'A.

MORE PROOF.

The proof of the pudding is the eating of it and the increasing business of a merchant is a sure sign of the popularity of his goods and the fairness of his dealings.

Nothwithstanding the wiley schemes of many of our would–be competitors we are daily growing and multiplying. Our trade, so far this season, is away ahead of all previous years and our prospects for the future still brightening.

Let us again assure our Ebensburg friends that their trade is ever appreciated and solicited entirely in a question of the best goods for the least money.

We are still the same Reliable One Price Clothing House and defy any other to undersell us or supply the same quality, make or fit of goods that we command in Johnstown.

In your purchases consult both quality and price and when comparing our goods with those of others, examine critically the get-up, the finish, the make, the fit and the lasting qualities of both. Remember orders by mail will receive prompt and careful attention.

THE BOTTOM IS REACHED AT LAST.

The largest stock of hardware ever offered in the County can be found at my store. I am now selling many goods at much less than I can replace them for, but I will continue to sell at Bottom Prices until I am compelled to replenish my stock. When you want a cooking or heating stove, tinware hardware, nails, iron, glass, trunks and farming implements, call and see my stock and learn my prices.

G. HUNTLEY,

HIGH STREET, — — — EBENSBURG

Restored to Sight After Four Year's Blindness.

Mr. George Hoffman, of Johnstown, several years ago lost the sight of one eye by cataract, and was operated on by one of Pittsburgh's oculists without success. The other eye became blind about that time and has remained so four years. Last week he put his case under Dr. Sadler's care, at 804 Penn avenue, Pittsburgh. The operation was so perfect Mr. H. declared he felt no pain, and has not since, and that his sight is clear. The Doctor will visit his patients at Johnstown, Friday, June 3d, and any who wish, can consult him at the Hulbert House 10.30 a. m to 4.30 p. m.

RURAL VIEW
SUMMER RESORT.

RURAL VIEW is located at Chest Springs, Cambria County, Pa., a rural mountain village of churches and schoolhouses reposing amid scenes of peaceful Agriculture. RURAL VIEW is at a convenient and quiet distance from Ashville, on the Cresson, Clearfield Co. & New York Short Route Railroad.

THIS AGREEABLE RURAL SUMMER RESORT on the mountain plateau, three thousand feet above the sea-level, is well deserving of the public patronage. Its environments of rural beauty; the purity of the air, and its crystal springs; its healthful and genial climate and peaceful retirement from the busy world—all these characteristics commend this RESORT to tired seekers after rest and calm repose.

The constraint of fashionable hotel life is replaced with the ease and peace of quiet home life, which characteristic commends RURAL VIEW to a certain class of health and pleasure seekers

RURAL VIEW reposes amid orchards and meadows, with the towering green woodland in the background; fruits and vegetables teem in abundant freshness from the rich garden, while the milky herd afford rich white nectar in overflowing measure.

The site of the house is on a gentle rise of ground, the dividing-ridge between the headwaters of the Clearfield and Chest creeks, and these streams afford piscatorial treasures in variety to the rod and line of the fisher.

The place is fitted up with a view to the accomodation and recreation of guests.

The roads, in three directions, afford pleasant drives through farming regions, and woodland scenery—seven miles to Loretto, five to Carrolltown, and three to St. Augustine.

Ponds, brooks and streams entice to piscatorial sports, and the woods afford small game in season.

Vegetables in their season will be supplied from the proprietors garden, and milk from the dairy.

LIVERY will be kept on the place, those wishing to bring their own teams will be provided with good stabling and careful attendance.

The MAIL arrives in the village daily. TELEGRAPH at Loretto, SKILLFUL MEDICAL ATTENDANCE close by in the village.

The TERMS are reasonable, and will suit the most economical. Reference furnished if desired.

Guests for RURAL VIEW will stop at Ashville, on the Cresson, Clearfield Co. & New York Short Route Railroad, which connects with the Main Line of the Pennsylvania Railroad at Cresson, Pa. The proprietor's coach will meet all trains. For further particulars, address, Farm Notes.

Good drainage is essential to a good garden.

It is said that 1,000 women own and manage farms in Iowa.

Find out what crops grow best on your farm and land give attention to those.

Horses need extra care and plenty of time to eat in when first put to farm work.

An occasional panful of apples fed to the horses will be found equal to condition powders.

Cauliflower is a delicious vegetable, not as well known out of our large cities as it should be.

The thorough use of the curry-comb and brush on horses and cows that are sheddings their coats will pay.

Regularity as to time of milking should be observed, and the milk drawn quickly Irregularity and slowness dries up a cow.

Warts may be removed by the application of fresh beef steeped twenty-four hours in vinegar in a week they will disappear.

When a board gets loose on any farm building, fasten it at once. A nail in time saves nine, and perhaps many feet of lumber.

Crude petroleum when applied to fences and portions of buildings that rest upon the ground, will be found an excellent preservative.

Plant Lima beans on the poorest soil you have, supply no manure and stop the growth of vines at the top of the poles by successive pinchings.

Roots are excellent for sheep in winter, and are especially important with heavy grain feeding to keep the digestive organs in full vigor.

Wire netting, two inch mesh, is now cheaper than boards as material for fencing poultry, and can be more easily arranged and with less labor.

Limbs broken off young trees should have the part smoothed down with grafting wax so as to exclude the air, and they will heal much sooner than if exposed.

Much is said of the advantages of the use of cotton seed in the feeding of cows. The addition of one quart per day of cotton seed meal to the regular feed will be found beneficial.

Cows that kick or draw milk from udders should be sent to the butcher. Remedies to prevent such vices are not only useless as permanent cures, but also troublesome to apply.

It is claimed the best results are sustained from superphosphates when used in connection with barnyard manures. but this depends upon the food from which the manure is produced.

The larva of the borer lives several years in trees. Hence, be sure to probe for the borer and remove him if possible. Borers have done more damage to the peach tree than all the diseases known.

Sour milk mixed with two quarts of ground oats and one of wheat middlings is an excellent egg-eroducing food for hens, and will greatly promote laying as well as assisting to keep the hen in good health.

An excellent method to utilizing the hayseed and dust is to place it where the hens can scratch it over. They will find quite an amount of valuable material which would be useless for any other purpose.

The following is recommended as one of the best cures for a cold : One ounce paregoric, one ounce spirits camphor, two of castor oil, and three ounces of molasses. Shake well, and take a tablespoonful three times a day.

To keep a sink fresh, put a lump of washing soda in the sink and pour boiling water over it. This will prevent water in which cabbage, onions, or turnips have been boiled from imparting an unpleasant odor to the sink.

To press raised embroidery, lay a wet towel on the table or the carpet ; spread over this the piece of work right side up, and tack tightly to the floor, taking care to draw it tight enough to remove all wrinkles ; let it dry in this position.

A fresh egg will sink when placed in water, and when boiled the skin will not peel off like that of an orange as is the case with those not strictly fresh. Stale eggs are glassy and very smooth, while fresh eggs have a peculiar roughness.

Diptheria seems to be becoming prevalent in neighboring localities. We trust it will spare our community. The Philadelphia Times Almanac says : Turpentine given in doses of a teaspoonful every eight hours, in milk or coffee, will effect a cure.

COWS FROM THE CHANNEL ISLANDS.—Considerable confusion exists in the minds of many farmers in regard to the terms "Alderney," "Jersey" and "Guernsey as applied to cows from the Channel Islands or their decendants bred in this country. In a word, they don't quite know the distinguishing traits between a so-called Jersey cow and an Alderney, for instance. Properly speaking, an Alderney cow is one from the island of Alderney or its direct decendant, just as a Jersey is, properly speaking, a cow from the island of Jersey. The fact, however, that the cattle imported from these several Channel Islands are substantially the same—the islands having a similar appearance and belonging to the same geological formation—renders it of small importance which name is applied.

The fact that but few other than Jerseys are imported to this country from the Channels Islands has naturally encouraged the use of the term Jersey for the Channel Islands cows and their decendants.

Distress After Eating.

This result of indigestion will no longer be experienced if Simmons Liver Regulator is taken after each meal. It is such a good digester, and so mild and pleasant in its effect that it is used by many, after a hearty meal, to insure good digesion. The Regulator does not nauseate or irritate the stomach, but corrects acidity, dispels foul gases, allays irritation, and assists the stomach in its digestion.

KASKINE
THE NEW QUININE.

GIVES GOOD APPETITE STRENGTH, QUIET NERVES, HAPPY DAYS, SWEET SLEEP.

A POWERFUL TONIC,
that the most delicate stomach will bear.

A SPECIFIC FOR MALARIA, RHEUMATISM, NERVOUS PROSTRATION, and all Germ Diseases.

The most scientific and successful Blood Purifier. Superior to quinine.

Mr. F. A. Miller, 650 East 187th street, New York, was cured by Kaskine of extreme malarial prostration after seven years suffering. He had run down from 175 pounds to 97, began on Kaskine in June, 1886, went to work in one month and regained his full weight in six months. Quinine did him no good whatever.

Mr. Gideon Thompson, the oldest and one of the most respected citizens of Bridgeport, Conn., says: "I am ninety years of age, and for the last three years have suffered from malaria and the effects of quinine poisoning. I recently began with Kaskine which broke up the malaria and increased my weight 22 pounds."

Mrs. T. A. Solomon, of 190 Halliday St., Jersey City, writes : My son, Harry, eleven years, was cured of Malaria by Kaskine, after fifteen months' illness, when we had given up all hope."

Letters from the above persons, giving full details will be sent on application.

Kaskine can be taken without any special medical advice. $1 a bottle. Sold by all druggists, or sent by mail on receipt of price.

THE CHANGING STARS.—When primitive man learned that with the lapsing years the oak withered and the very rock decayed, more slowly but as surely as himself, he looked up to the stars as the very types of contrast to the change he shared, and fondly deemed them eternal. But now we have found change there, and that probably the star clusters and the nebulæ, even if clouds of suns and worlds, are fixed only by comparison with our own brief years, and, tried by the terms of their own long existence are fleeting like ourselves. * * * I have read somewhere a story about a race of ephemeral insects who live but an hour. To those who are born in the early morning the sunrise is the time of youth. They die of old age while his beams are yet gathering force, and only their decendants live on to midday ; while it is another race which sees the sun decline from that which saw him rise. Imagine the sun about to set, and the whole nation of mites gathered under the shadow of some mushroom (to them ancient as the sun itself) to hear what their wisest philosopher has to say of the gloomy prospect. If I remember aright, he first told them that, incredible as it might seem, there was not only a time in the world's youth when the mushroom itself was young, but the sun in those early ages was in the Eastern, not in the Western, sky. Since then, he explained, the eyes of scientific ephemera had followed it, and established by induction from vast experince the great law of nature, that it moved only Westward ; and he showed that since it was now nearing the Western horizon, science herself pointed to the conclusion that it was about to disappear forever, together with the great race of Ephemera for whom it was created. What his hearers thought of this discourse I do not remember, but I have heard that the sun rose again the next morning.

WISE WORDS.—To have what we want is riches, but to be able to do without is power.

There is no limit to the age at which a man may make a fool of himself.

Agitation is the marshaling of the conscience of a nation to mold its laws.

What we call our despair is often only the painful eagerness of unfed hope.

A man who cannot mind his own business, is not to be trusted with the King's.

Anger ventilated often hurries toward forgiveness ; anger concealed often hardens into revenge.

No grander thing can a man do than to giving a helping hand to a man who has become discouraged.

A man's nature runs either to herbs or to weeds ; therefore let him seasonably water the one and destroy the other.

Talent, lying in the understanding, is often inherited ; genius being the action of reason or imagination, rarely or never.

Time washes away the customs and opinions of mankind, but human nature remains the same in its essential qualities or principles.

The man who is suspicious, lives in a constant state of unhappiness. It would be better for his peace of mind to be too trustful than too guarded.

All experience hath shown that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed.

ADVICE TO COUNTRY GIRLS.—City life is not all that it is painted. It has its pleasures and conveniences, but it also has its serious drawbacks. Before making the plunge into the city life country girls should ask themselves what is really gained by it.

Perhaps in their quiet homes some stray advertisement has reached them, promising to young women high salaries and light work. Hundreds of these advertisements are framed for the purpose of deceiving the unwary. They accomplish their purpose, however and a large number of young girls rush up to the city, dazzled by the generous profusion of promises.

A girl on a farm answers one of these advertisements. Life may have been slow at home, but there was good food and in plenty, and there was some one to care for in the old farmhouse. When she goes to the big city, she finds that the "light wark" consists in working all day in a badly lighted work-shop, where scores of other girls and women are employed, at wages hardly high enough to keep body and soul together.

We know what often comes next. The girl has left home ; she is ashamed or unwilling to return, and she must take the conquences, oft times one of the two things—shame or suffering. Many a girl finds first in the frivolities and next in the iniquity of the streets that excitement by which regret and remorse may be deadened. If she is to strong in principle, too pure and elevated in tone thus to sink down to one of the pitiable women of the street, she may find herself in some cold garret, lonely, overworked, despondent and miserable.

Better remain at home than risk the failure which attends so many girls who go to the city in pursuit of high pay and light work. It the saddest of all ventures—forsaking a country home for the illusions and deceptions of a large town.

A President on Brandy for Sickness.

The President of the Baltimore Medical College, Dr. Byrd, who has thoroughly tested Speer's wines, etc, says:

I have prescribed Speer's Port Grape Wine with marked and decidedly beneficial effects. I am prepared to bear testimony to the value of his Pedro J. Brandy, also, as a pure and valuable article in all cases of disease in which a reliable stimulant is required. I would be happy to feel that I was instrumental in inducing my fellow citizens to patronize these productions, to the exclusion of the "doctored" and harmfully adulterated wines and brandies with which our people are often injured.

President and Professor of Obstetrics and diseases of Women and Children Baltimore Medical College.

Tramp—Oh, they are lay brethern.

A SWINDLER

does not refer possible purchasers to his victims. The Athlophoros Co. gladly refers sufferers from rheumatism, neuralgia, sciatics, nervous or sick headache, kidney and liver complaints to those who have been cured of these diseases by Athlophoros, and will furnish names and addresses of many such persons to those desiring them. Athlophoros is the only remedy for these diseases that can stand such a test.

A. L. Thomas, Cuba, N. Y., says: "My son, J. M. Thomas, had been suffering from rheumatism for several months. Athlophoros relieved him of the pain, and reduced the swelling of the joints, and the lameness entirely disappeared. I have seen those having neuralgia cured by taking one dose."

A. Beard, Mt. Kisco, N. Y., says: "I have been troubled for some time with sciatica and rheumatism, brought on by working in a damp place. I could find no remedy in medicine I was using, until I tried a bottle of Athlophoros, which gave me immediate relief."

Mrs. Alfred Thurston, 42 North Main Street, Wilkesbarre, Pa., says: "I am not troubled with rheumatism now, since using Athlophoros. I believe, should it in any case fail to relieve and permanently cure, the cause would be that the directions were not faithfully followed."

J. J. Savitz, Nazareth, Pa., says: "I gave two bottles of Athlophoros to my sister, and she has entirely recovered. She was afflicted with inflammatory rheumatism and St. Vitus' dance, and although we had two of the best doctors, she gradually grew worse. She would scream from pain night and day. I heartily recommend it.

Every druggist should keep Athlophoros and Athlophoros Pills, but where they cannot be bought of the druggist the Athlophoros Co., 112 Wall St., New York, will send either (carriage paid) on receipt of regular price, which is $1.00 per bottle for Athlophoros and 50c. for Pills.

For liver and kidney diseases, dyspepsia, indigestion, weakness, nervous debility, diseases of women, constipation, headache, impure blood, &c., Athlophoros Pills are unequaled.

A. B. FARQUHAR, York, Pa.

BORDEN, a corespondent of the Philadelphia Record has this to say I am glad to see people are taking this sensible view of the country question. There is no such place as the country to live in if one live properly in it. The trouble is that when people go to the country they ignore all the laws of hygiene, and disregard all the rules that they have lived by, and the consequence is that they come home in the fall with fevers or malarial diseases, and curse the country as their cause, when the trouble is entirely with themselves. The country is all right ; it is only that they don't know how to live there. They sit out at nightfall without anything on their heads or around their shoulders, they walk in the grass when it is wet with dew, they drink iced milk by the goblet full, and they live altogether in the most reckless and desperate manner, and then they blame the country. There is no place that I know of where people can sit out of doors, particularly just after sundown, without a hat or a wrap of some kind, and it is impossible for a person to begin drinking milk by the gobletful without bringing on a billious attack. Milk is about the richest food that a person can take, and those who are unused to it have to take it by degrees. I was talking to an old country doctor the other day on this very subject, and he said just so long as people would drink milk in quantities, as such people do when they go to the country, just so long would they suffer the consequences. They must take to it by degrees, and when their stomachs shall have become used to milk they can, if they want to, live on it entirely without any other food. I know one man who is about 80 years of age, but who is so young looking and so active on his pins that his friends have got an idea that he is in league with the devil. I asked him one day what was the secret of his health and his youthful appearance. He said milk entirely ; he lived on a milk diet, and he felt as young as when he began on the same food

A SOLID FACT.—The prudent man in business never fails to keep his name before the public in some shape. There is a wide diversity of opinion as to the best way to advertise, but as to advertising at all there is, and can be but one opinion, and that is advertising by those who have goods to sell, is not only a good thing, but absolutely necessary to success. There is no use in advertising for a day, a week, a month, or even a year, and then stopping, thinking that all has been done. A good trade may have been built up by advertising liberally for a year, but are your customers going to stick to you when you stop letting them know what you have to sell and inviting them to come and buy. An occasional one will, but the great majority of the people who do the buying will go where they are constantly being invited to go.

A well regulated, systematic and prudent system of advertising, backed up by the establishment itself making good all it says in the advertisement, is certain to lead to success. It is just as important that care should be given to the business man's advertising as it is that customers should be politely and courteously treated when they enter his establishment. In these days of competition, no business man can afford to neglect giving attention to the advertising of his wares.

LEFT-HANDED PEOPLE.—Dr. Louis Jubert has just published a book on "The Left-Handed," in which he treats inexhaustively of the clsss of persons who are more dextrous, if we may use such a pun, with the sinister than with dexter hand. He says that no traveler has yet come into contact with a purely left-handed race, but there are some tribes which, from immemoriel time, have given preference to the use of the left hand. Among such tribes, however, not more than seventy per cent. are left-handed. It is sometimes the rule among such tribes to account the left-handed side, instead of the right, as the place of honor. He prints a curious appendix by Dr. Monro, who has made extensive studies of the physiological peculiarities of the criminal class. Dr. Monro asserts that he has found among the condemned criminals twenty-five per cent. who were left-handed while a comparative research among other persons has convinced him that the proportion of the left-handed is not above nine per cent. This would seem a sort of justification of the moral application of the word "sinister."

TRIBUTE TO A MOTHER.—Children, look in those eyes, listen to that dear voice, notice the feeling of even a single touch that is bestowed upon you by that hand ! Make much of it while yet you have that most precious of all good gifts, a loving mother. Read the unfathomed love of those eyes ; the kind anxiety of that tone and look, however slight your pain. In after life you may have friends ; but never again will you have the inexpressible love and gentleness lavished upon you which none but a mother bestows. Often do I sigh in the struggle with the hard, uncaring world, for the sweet, deep security I felt when, of and evening, nestling in her bosom, I listened to some quiet tale suitable to my age, read in her untiring voice. Never can I forget her sweet glances cast upon me when I appeared to be asleep ; never her kiss at night. Years have passed away since we have laid her beside my father in the old church yard ; yet still her voice whispers from the grave, and her eye watches over me, as I visit spots long since hallowed to the memory of my mother.

HE was four years old and had received his first trumpet. He enjoyed it immensely. When he was put to bed his mother asked him to put away his trumpet and say his prayers. "I tell you what let's do, mamma," said the young man. "You pray, and I'll just keep on blowing."

The Wonderful Healing Properties of Darbys Prophylactic Fluid.

Wherever a preventing, healing, cleansing and deodorizing injecting or wash is required use Darbys Prophylactic Fluid. Any inflamed surface, external or internal, treated with the Fluid will be quickly relieved. It has effected cures that had resisted the best medical skill.

Is Life Worth Living?

That depends upon the Liver, for if the Liver is inactive the whole system is out of order—the breath is bad, digestion poor, head dull or aching, energy and hopefulness gone, the spirits are depressed, a heavy weight exists after eating, with general despondency and the blues. The Liver is the housekeeper of the health ; and a harmless, simple remedy that acts like Nature, does not constipate afterwards or require constant taking, does not interfere with business or pleasure during its use, makes Simmons Liver Regulator a medical perfection.

I have tested its virtues personally, and know that for Dyspepsia, Biliousness and Throbbing Headache, it is the best medicine the world ever saw. Have tried forty other remedies before Simmons Liver Regulator, and none of them gave more than temporary relief, but the Regulator not only relieved but cured.

Familiar Maxims.

Wise-saws are the literature of reason ; the condensed thought of the public mind ; the wisdom of many, the wit of one. To the ancients they were both philosophy and religion, and even among moderns they go unchanged, though many of them are palpably false. Such is their currency and force that they serve to parry a thrust or clinch an argument, and thrice armed is he who hath whole flights of them at his command.

The following, says the Philadelphia Times, were picked up at random and arranged alphabetically under the general term of "wise-saws :"

A little folly now and then is relished by the best of men.

A game is never won until it's ended.

A fair exchange is no robbery.

A shoemaker should stick to his last.

A bad oath is better broken than kept.

A stich in time saves nine.

A short horse is soon curried.

A rolling stone gathers no moss.

A setting hen never grows fat.

A watched pot never boils.

A miss is as good as a mile.

A bird in hand is worth two in the bush.

A smooth sea never makes skillful mariners.

A guilty concience needs no accuser.

A drowning man catches at straws.

A new broom sweeps clean.

A fool for luck.

A fool and his money are soon parted.

A barking dog seldom bites.

A friend in need is a friend indeed.

A quiet tounge makes a wise head.

An idle brain is the devil's work shop.

An honest man is the noblest work of God.

An honest confession is good for the soul.

An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

All is fish that comes to my net.

All is not gold that gliters.

All is well that ends well.

All is fair in love or war.

As many opinions as people.

As the twig is bent the tree's inclined.

Artists are born, not made.

Accidents will happen in the best of families.

Always kick the dog that's under.

An old fox is not easy caught.

A cheerful spirit sweetens toil.

Better wear out than rust out.

Better let well enough alone.

Better late than never.

Better, the day better the deed.

Better do it than wish it done.

Better have two cooks than one doct
